WARHAMMER CITADEL MINIATURES

This Catalog that you are holding in your hand is your complete source for the Warhammer line of Citadel Miniatures. All the black and white models are shown at ACTUAL SIZE, although some of the war machines and color references had to be reduced. Unless otherwise noted, all Citadel Miniatures are made of PEWTER. When possible we have pictured miniatures in the catalog next to their blister "mates". Duplicate models are shown when miniatures are packed with more than one variant. You can find packaging details at the bottom of each code section, telling you which accessories come with the models. Games Workshop's plastic slottabases are supplied with all miniatures that require them. Below is a convenient reference system that will help you to quickly and conveniently find where in the catalog each model is pictured.

THE WARHAMMER HOBBY

In a war-torn fantasy world armies meet and clash. Massed ranks of troops maneuver and attack, massive War Machines unleash their devastating power, and wizards cast earth-shattering spells. Using armies of Citadel Miniatures, the Warhammer game puts all the action of these conflicts right onto your tabletop!

GETTING STARTED

The hobby starts when you open the Warhammer, boxed game. Absolutely packed full of miniatures, Warhammer contains rules, dice, and everything you need to play. Any flat surface quickly becomes the battlefield where you and your opponent maneuver armies of Citadel Miniatures in a fast-paced test of skills and tactics, but the hobby doesn't end there.

Customers make their selections.

EXPANDING YOUR GAME

The excitement and fun of a tightly contested battle is just part of the Warhammer Hobby. As players continue to game and fight out larger battles, they can expand their forces with new troop types, war machines, and entire new armies. Citadel Miniatures makes thousands of different pewter and plastic models specifically to supplement the Warhammer World. With this extensive range of blister packs and boxed sets of Citadel Miniatures, players can collect and build up vast armies. Whether you choose the proud army of the High Elves, the raiding hordes of Orcs and Goblins, or the nightmare legions of the Undead, there are plenty of great models to choose from and collect.

BRILLIANTLY PAINTED MINIATURES

Part of the Warhammer Hobby is painting figures. Nothing brings a tabletop battlefield to life like a well painted army of Citadel Miniatures. Games Workshop has created the Citadel Colour range of paints specifically for use on our models. In order to help beginners get started in this aspect of the hobby, the Warhammer boxed game contains a basic painting guide and there is also a whole range of books covering the more advanced techniques. By using a few fun but simple to learn procedures, players will soon have an army to be proud of.

STUNNING GAMING TERRAIN

The first few games most people play will be on a flat tabletop with little terrain but the basic card buildings supplied in the boxed game. Many players will develop the urge to add hills, woods, rivers, and more. Varied terrain makes for more interesting battles and adds new tactical challenges to the game. The possibilities are endless as battles can take place over ancient graveyards or even impregnable castles. Making scenery is part of what makes Warhammer more than just a single game, but an entire hobby.

WHICH BRINGS US TO THIS CATALOG

With this catalog in hand tabletop Generals and model collectors can now pore over the entire line of Citadel Miniatures for Warhammer. Grouped together by army, each miniature is shown as close as possible to ACTUAL SIZE. Packaging information, like whether the models come in boxed sets or blister packs, as well as what plastic accessories are included, can be found at the bottom of each page. Each month Games Workshop puts out dozens of new models, so to keep up-to-date with the latest New Releases check out White Dwarf, the monthly magazine devoted to the Games Workshop Hobby.

The new Citadel Colour Paint Set contains everything needed to get started in the hobby.

An inside look at a fully stocked and ready to play Games Workshop Store.

THE GAMES WORKSHOP HOBBY

In conjunction with this catalog, Games Workshop has a whole series of FREE literature to help you better enjoy the hobby. The World of Games Workshop is a 28 page overview of the Games Workshop and Citadel Miniatures hobby, including Warhammer and all the other great Games Workshop games. Also look for the Citadel Collector's Guides - small booklets which briefly explain strategies for collecting and playing your Warhammer, Warhammer 40,000, and Epic Armies. For beginners some of these army-building tips are invaluable. All these guides are free from better gaming stores, or if there are no well stocked shops around, give us a call directly.

Dwarfs make grim warriors who never forgive, never surrender, and never forget a grievance. They are renowned for their courage and their rock-solid dependability on the battlefield.

0840 - BUGMAN'S BREWERS (Boxed set)

Joseph Bugman was the most famous Dwarf Brewer of all time until a Goblin raiding party destroyed his brewhouse and captured his relatives. Swearing a terrible vengeance against all greenskins, Bugman and his companions now roam the Warhammer World seeking to settle old scores and drink deeply from the cup of revenge.

Bugmen's intrepid band trailed the Goblins across the World's Edge Mountains and into the wilderness beyond. Little was heard of them again except for rumors of the ravages of Bugman and his band, of cunning ambushes and night raids on Goblin camps. Sometimes the band would suddenly emerge from the wilds, tattered and blood-stained, to join up with a Dwarf Army before a great battle with the Goblins. They kept to themselves, huddled around their own campfire, with a strange glint in their eyes and their hands clasped around tankards of precious ale.

The Flame Cannon is perhaps the most famous and deadly of all the creations of the secretive Dwarf Engineers Guild. Capable of spewing forth a gout of burning pitch, the Flame Cannon can so completely annihilate a unit of troops that there is nothing left but oily, smoking piles of goo.

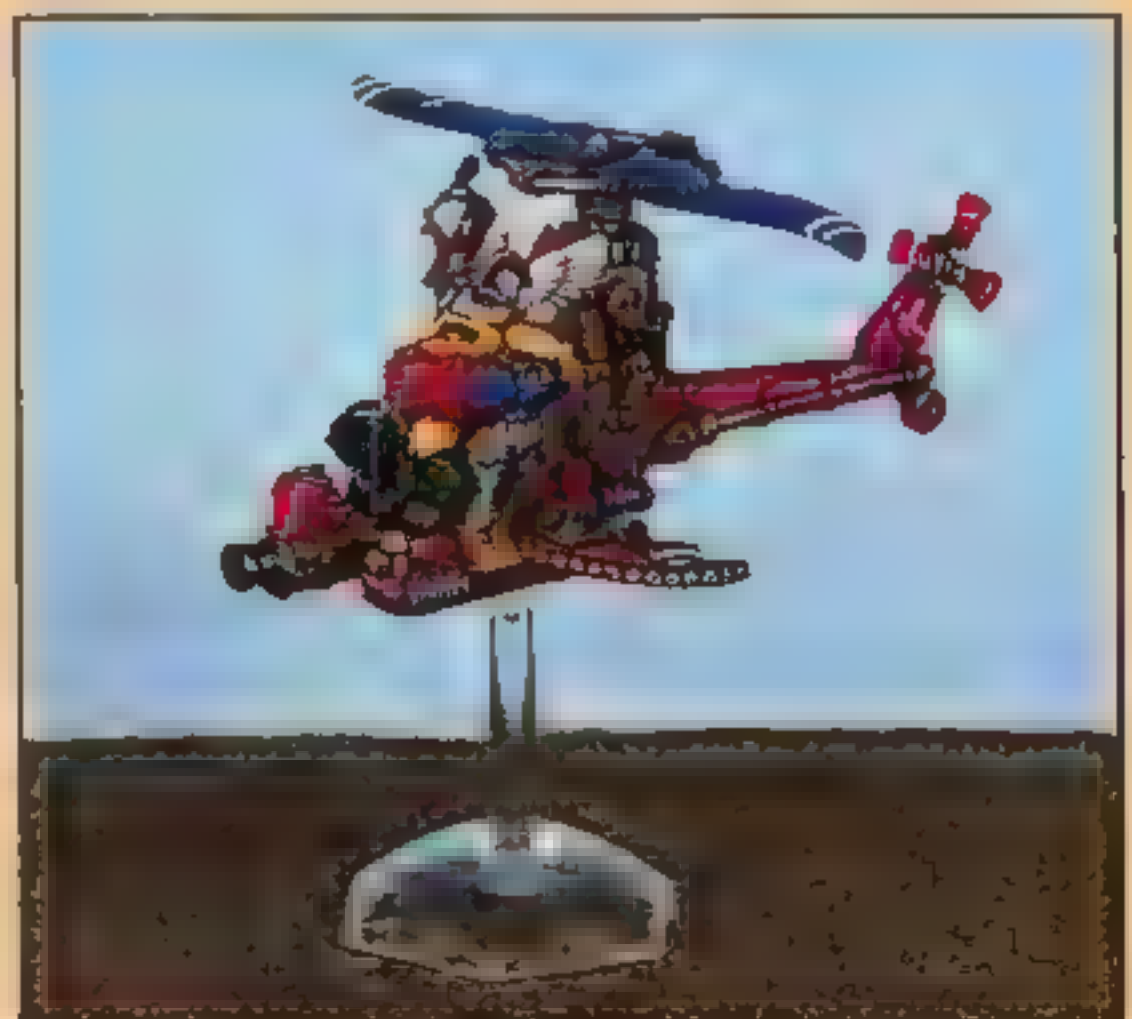

Along with its devastating ability to engulf entire enemy regiments in sheets of fire, the Flame Cannon is so dreadful a weapon that any unit even touched by the burning shot must immediately take a panic test.

At the time of its invention the Flame Cannon was thought too volatile for use in battle, but after its performance during the Skaven tunnel wars the Engineers Guild quickly bumped up production. It was said the tunnels under Karaz-a-Karak smelt like burnt Skaven for years after the assault.

0755 - GOBLINS (Plastic boxed set)

When grouped in large formations Goblins become incredibly effective troops – either swarming over the enemy in a wave of superior numbers, or darkening the skies with clouds of arrows.

0796 - BLACK ORCS (Plastic boxed set)

The biggest and strongest of all Orcs, Black Orcs rely on brute strength and their two hand weapons to grind all opposition into the ground. Orc Warlords always try to recruit Black Orcs into their Waaagh! because along with their invaluable warrior skills, Black Orcs are one of the only units in an Orc and Goblin Army that is not subject to animosity.

With this boxed set of 10 finely sculpted plastic Black Orcs Warhammer generals are well on their way to amassing an Orc army to be reckoned with.

0760 - ORCS (Plastic boxed set)

Orcs are harsh and brutal warriors who love nothing more than a good scrap. If Orcs can't find any enemy to fight, they will quickly resort to battling it out amongst themselves.

0528 - AZHAG THE SLAUGHTERER (Boxed set)

One of the most infamous of all Orc Warlords, Azhag the Slaughterer led a legendary Orc Waaagh! rampaging through the very heart of the Empire.

Azhag rode to war atop a large and particularly ferocious Wyvern, but what really made Azhag dangerous was the Crown of Sorcery.

Another of Azhag's special abilities, and one that made his career as a Warlord so successful, is his ability to prevent the usual effects of Orc and Goblin animosity within 12" of his person. Other greenskins just wouldn't dare to disobey any of Azhag's orders!

Goblin riders and their slaving wolf mounts make one of the fastest cavalry strike forces in the Warhammer game. The howling of wolves is the eerie foreshadowing of an incoming Goblin raid!

0824 - ORC WAR WYVERN (Boxed set)

Death from above! Orc Shaman with a taste for victory prefer to ride to battle on Wyverns - great winged beasts which attack with huge rending claws and gaping jaws with row after row of barbed teeth.

Streaking out of the sky like a thunderbolt of destruction, the Wyvern rips and tears into units while the Orc Shaman pulls out the very essence of Orcness and uses it to form the potent spells of Waaagh Magic.

The massive leathery wings of the Wyvern give the Shaman the ability to move across the battlefield, as well as quickly hunting down and destroying fleeing enemy units.

GIANT

0829 - GIANT (Boxed set)

The ground shakes with every monumental stride and even the bravest of warriors shake in their boots as a Giant bears down upon them. Immense size and strength make Giants especially formidable. No armour ever forged could stand a prayer against the walloping blows of a Giant's tree-trunk weapon. But a Giant's arsenal of attacks does not end with a tree-trunk - Giants have been known to use their tremendous size to stamp on opponents, pick them up, eat them, jump up on down on them, and even worse. Giants leave behind them a wake of destruction including broken landscape, flattened troops, and even creatures imbedded into the ground by a discriminating thump from the Giant's mighty club.

For three days Gunther Nusbaum had followed the trail of the Giant as it wandered down from the World's Edge Mountains and, following a branch of the mighty Reik river, headed straight for the fertile plains of Averland. The path had never been hard to follow - with the constant signs of wrecked farmhouses, half-eaten livestock and the unmistakable footprints of a creature that stood taller than all but the oldest of oak trees. Until now Gunther had not set eyes upon his quarry, but he knew he was closing in. The ground trembled with each lumbering step and after cleaning the last of the foothills, Gunther could clearly see the behemoth's head looming over a copse of pine trees. Flipping down his visor Gunther thought once more upon the riches and glory that would be heaped upon him for slaying a marauding giant, then spurring his horse to a gallop Gunther charged into the immortality of legend.

Even to this day throughout the Empire every child knows the tale of Gunther the mad and his heroic slaying of a Giant and his own subsequent death when the giant toppled upon him.
